Original Poetry.

For the Republican.

FAREWELL TO VIRTUE,

BY "CUPID."

Poor fallen virtue, trampled down,
And crushed low in the dust;
You, in your day enjoyed renown,
And now like others must—
Stand back and view with tear-dimed eyes,
The wreck of womanhood;
As shattered, soiled, debauched, it lies,
Disrobed of all that's good.

No arts' too vile—no crimes too deep,
To sear the heart that's pure;
Though hosts of angels their watch keep,
And vigilance secure.
The innocent will yield and fall,
And base seduction reign;
While virtue robed in death's cold pall,
Will grieve, but grieve in vain.

No wonder then that angels weep,
O'er woman's fallen state;
If virtue, now, has sunk so deep,
Alas! what is her fate?
"A long farewell to purity,"
Sighs virtue once again;
'Tis echoed o'er the world's rough sea,
And echoed back again.

Select Miscellany.

The Chritmas Night of a Fisherman.

A TALE OF THE PACIFIC COAST.

It was near the Eve of Christmas,
Dark fantastic clouds enveloped the western horizon. Darker and darker they became as the northwestern breeze arose, and soon the veil of night enveloped land and sea, and nothing could be seen except the phosphorescent sheen of foam-crested waves, over which shone the beacon light of Point St. Isabelle.—Sometimes the wind drove the clouds asunder, and the moon became visible, shedding a flood of gorgeous light over the dashing waves, and seeming to bathe the shore and lighthouse in a halo of glory, and lighting up the hull, spars and sails of a brigantine that tossed upon the waves, not many miles from shore. The next moment another darker bank of clouds advanced, and again nothing would be visible but the sheen of the waves and the steady beacon of the lighthouse.

Hark! Distinctly the boom of a gun could be heard above the roar of the waters.

A minute after another and another boom came over the waves. It was the call for help of a vessel in distress.

Two men stood before the door of the lighthouse. They were gazing towards a flickering light that was ascending the path, borne in the hands of a woman.

"It's Dora Grayton. Poor woman! she is looking for her husband. What shall we tell her?" asked the lighthouse keeper, taking his night glass from his eye.

"Tell her," answered the other, a rough, weather-beaten fisherman, "tell her he's gone down, boat and all!

"You can't tell her that. Besides you are not sure that his boat hasn't weathered the gale. You did well to make for the shore before night, but Grayton was further out than you. The last I saw before it got too dark was his boat near the brigantine!"

"P'raps he got aboard of her; p'raps not, for a boat can't live ten minutes in such a sea!" cried the fisherman, pointing with his hand towards the huge waves that thundered against the shore over which they broke, throwing the spray far inland.

"My—husband—my husband! have you seen him?" panted the woman, as she rushed pass the two men into the shelter of the arched doorway.

A howling gust of wind sweeping around the corners of the lighthouse drowned the answer of the fisherman.—She grasped his arm and again demanded the whereabouts of her husband.

"He hasn't come in. I guess he's aboard the brigantine!" answered the man.

"What vessel fired the guns?" inquired Dora.

"Well, I guess it was the brigantine," cried the lighthouse keeper. "See! she's sending up signal rockets!" he shouted a moment after.

Again a lurid light illuminated the wild scene; It was the second rocket—another call for help from the vessel.

"If she's firing another rocket she's on the banks or on the rocks. It matters little which way she goes down!" shouted the fisherman.

The next moment he run down the path to the shore, for a third rocket had been fired.

"Take my child—take my child—I must save my husband!" screamed Dora pushing a bundle into the hands of the lighthouse keeper.

"Stop! stop!" cried he, but she had already vanished from his sight.

With a doubtful shake of his head the keeper entered the kitchen where he found his wife, into whose charge he gave the bundle.

"Poor babe, only six months old and already fatherless!" exclaimed the kind woman unrolling the large shawl in which was wrapped a sleeping child.

"It's a pity, sure enough," sympathized the kind hearted keeper. "If," added he after a short pause, "the old man had relented and taken the couple to his house, Charlie Grayton would never have become a fisherman."

"Dora loved him, and told the old man that she'd rather drown herself than marry the rich fellow. And the old man said: 'Do so, you can do as you like. If you marry the poor boatman, you will never receive a cent of my wealth. If you ever get tired of living in a hut, then come to me—but don't bring your husband. My door will never be open for him.'"

"Yes, that's so. And I remember when Dora received a letter from her father in which he begged her to return and leave her husband and baby. That he had money enough to pay for a thousand divorces if she wanted to free herself from the bonds of matrimony," said the lighthouse keeper, who had put on his coat and hat.

"Now," he continued, "I'm off for the cave. Look out for the light and take care of the babe!"

With these words the lighthouse keeper left the room.

Let us follow him.

The sea was now in a perfect swirl, tossing its white-capped waves, high into the murky air, and the puffs of the gale seemed to have increased in strength. The waves leaped madly over the rocks that lined the shore, and the salt spray flew in feathery showers over a group of four men and one woman who were standing near the white line of the surf.

They all gazed seaward.

Again the veil of driving clouds rent asunder, and the light of the moon revealed a brigantine nearing a foam-crested line of rocks a mile away from the shore.

Soon a dull crash which sounded above the roar of the waters, proclaimed the doom of the vessel.

"My husband! my husband!" shrieked Dora, throwing her arms upward.

A white, gleaming speck was dancing a moment upon the crest of the huge wave that came rolling towards the breakers.

It was the fisherboat of Dora's husband.

By the aid of his night glass the lighthouse keeper saw that as the boat passed the stern of the vessel a man leaped overboard and was picked by the occupant of the boat.

"Your husband has saved a man, but they never will reach the shore; there's too much undertow along the cape, and the—" shouted the keeper, but he could not finish the sentence, for at that moment a large wave thundered against the shore and threw its blinding spray over the group.

After the wave had subsided, the party saw naught of the brigantine.

But between them and the reef of rocks danced the little boat of the fisherman.

"If we could get a line to them, they'll be saved. But we can't get a boat over the surf, and it would be risking one's life to swim out there," remarked a fisherman who stood near Dora.

"Give me a line, for God's sake, give me a line! I have learned to swim; he has taught me!" screamed Dora, pointing towards the little boat which was now only a few hundred yards from the shore.

It came no nearer despite the visible efforts of Charles Grayton who was rowing.

"Stuff and nonsense!" shouted the fisherman taking hold of Dora, who had taken a thin but stout fishing line from the locker of one of the boats lying upon the beach.

"Let me go, let me go! I will save him!" screamed Dora, biting him in the arm.

With a muttered curse the man loosened his hold, and Dora sprang to the edge of the roaring sea.

Keep hold of the end of the line!" were the last words she uttered.

The next moment a retreating wave had carried her from the shore.

Charles saw a form run to the shore and plunge into the dark waves. He stopped rowing and half rose from his seat as he shouted to his companion in the boat.

"Some one is coming out. I also see the men on shore acting as if uncoiling a line. If the fellow reaches this boat, then we are saved; if not, then God have mercy upon our souls, for we will surely drift toward the hog-back reef. I have used the oars since the storm began, and can scarcely lift them up."

"And I dislocated my wrist when I leaped overboard and tried to lift myself into your boat," cried the other.

"Husband! Charles!" came faintly from over the waters.

Grayton had sprang to his feet, and, holding on to a piece of the little mast which was still sticking in a hole of one of the boards, he gazed over the waves.

Far, far below him, in the trough of the sea, he saw the white, upturned face of his wife, and again heard her pronounce his name.

Instantly he fastened a little line to one of the oars and threw it towards the apparently exhausted woman; at the same time he shouted, "take hold, Dora; your life depends on it!"

Twice she missed the floating oar; the third time it was in her grasp. A minute after, Charles drew the fainting form of his wife over the gunwale of his boat.

Dora's first sense of returning life was a dim consciousness of the oder of water lilies. She opened her eyes and raised her hands to her brow. A general warmth surrounded her, diffussed from the cheerful fire that blazed in the large fireplace; and through the window panes came the warm rays of sunshine which alighted upon the head of an old man that was bending over her.

"Father, dear father!" murmured she, lifting up her arms. "My child, our savior!" sobbed the old man, holding her in a close embrace and kissing her tear-dimmed eyes.

"Yes our savior!" echoed her husband holding up to her gaze their little babe, which was dancing with its little feet as if, conscious of the joy that reigned at this moment within the room of Charles' abode.

"I have but a dim recollection of taking hold of the edge of the boat, then I remembered no more," said Dora, drawing her baby upon her bosom and kissing its rosy cheeks.

"I found the line around my waist, and after tying it to the ringbolt in the bow I signalled to the man on shore to pull. A short time after we were high and dry. It was an awful Christman night, Dora, but God in His mersy has spared our lives," said Charles, kissing her pale brow.

The old man lifted his hands as if in prayer.

"Glory to God on high—Peace and good will on earth!" he said, in a solemn tone. "Yes, children, forgive what I, in my vain pride, uttered against you when both begged me to give my consent to your union. An all-wise Providence had ordained that you should become the savior of my life. That vessel, of which I am the only survivor, belonged to me. I was on my way to Cape St. Lucas, where I intended to stay the rest of my life. When the brigantine struck the rocks I saw the boat of Charles, and I sprang towards it. He drew me in the boat. Children, this is the last day you remain in this wretched abode. I have already bought houses, and to-morrow we will be on our way to San Francisco. You shall never toil again, Charles. I care not for the loss of my brigantine; I still enjoy a princely income, and we will live henceforth together."

The bright golden rays of the Christmas sun shone upon the happy group, and the glistening dust that danced in the sunbeams seemed to rejoice at the reconciliation of father, daughter and son-in-law.—Golden Era.

The Value of Knowledge.

Knowledge, like virtue, is not good because it is useful, but useful because it is good. It is useful contingently, and good essentially. The joy of it is simple; and not only needs not to be supplemented by accessory advantages, but it is well worth the forfeit of many advantages to obtain. The most miserable wretch we can imagine is the ignorant convict locked up in a solitary cell, with nothing to employ his thoughts but unattainable vice and frustrated crime; whereon his stupid judges leave him to ruminate, as if such poison were moral medicine likely to cure the disease of his soul. And, on the other hand, one of the happiest beings we can imagine is the man at the opposite end of the intellectual scale, who lives in the free acquirement of noble knowledge. What is an "increase of sorrow" incurred thereby, compared to the joy of it?" To look on the fields of earth and air—not as the dull boor regards them, as mere patches of brown and green and blue, with promises of food or shelter, sunshine or shower—but as the geologist, the botanist, the astronomer regards them each as an infinite world of interest, wherein order and law and beauty are traced by his rapid thought, even as the swallow traces the insect on the wing! To be able to take surveys such as these, is to be admitted to a spectacle for which angels might envy the sons of men. But to do yet more, to make memory like a gallery hung round with all the loveliest scenes of nature, and all the masterpieces of art; to make the divine chorus of the poets sing for us their choicest strains, whenever we beckon them from the cells where they lie hidden deep in our souls; to talk familiarly, as if they were our living friends, with the best and wisest men who have ever lived on earth, and link our arms in theirs in the never withering groves of an eternal Academe—this is to be happy indeed. This is to burst the bonds of space, and to bring the ages together, and lift ourselves out of the sordid dust to sit at the banquet of heroes and of gods.—Frances Power Cobbe.

A DANGEROUS SYMPTOM.—George B. of this city, is a most inveterate smoker—in fact, G., has been known to go to sleep smoking, and have his pipe taken from his mouth without waking him. One day last week Uncle C. found a pipe, which he supposed to be G., and the old gentleman having known him from the time when the memory of that much respected individual, "the oldest inhabitant," runneth not back to, made a straight break for George's house, and seeing Mrs. B., asked:

"Is George dead?"

"George dead!" exclaimed Mrs. B, "Why no. What in the world made you think so, Mr. C.?"

"Why, I found his pipe, and it was cold."

Uncle C. dodged the broomstick, and will not be seen in that section again for some time.—Racine Journal.

BY HUGH JAMES BENFIN.

"Simon, Peter, John and James, Rebecca, Rachel, Martha and Sarah, these were the names the fond parents, John and Sarah Jones, bestowed upon the children God had given them. The two elder sons, Simon and Peter, were grown up into sturdy yeomen; John and James were aged respectively fifteen and eleven. Rebecca was nineteen and Rachel had attained the age at which mothers, in this age, begin to plase their daughters in the matrimonial market and to be disposed of to the highest bidder, namely seventeen; while Martha and Sarah were thirteen and nine.

"At this time John Jones, Sr., was five years on the shady side of fifty, while his good wife Sarah, was about to celebrate her fiftieth birthday. In these days this seems like a ripe old age, but this good couple were yet in the prime of their lives. They did not consume their substance and wear out their bodies in riotous living, but were temperate in the use of things useful, and totally abstinent from things pernicious. For thirty years they had lived together in peace and happiness. Useful labor gave them healthy bodies and wholesome appetites. Indigestion never made them gloomy and morose. Dyspepsia did not drive them to the devil, but health of body gave them serenity of mind, and christian love to God and man gave them peace of soul.

"It was the evening of a bright and beautiful day in autumn. In the morning John Jones, Sr., and his two elder sons, Simon and Peter, had taken their guns and gone forth into the not distant forest in search of game. Now they returned laden, bringing among other things, two large wild turkeys which were very desirable to grace the birth-day feast. About the same time John and James brought home a fine string of spotted trout from the brook that went wandering through the meadow. Martha and little Sallie had returned earlier in the day, with a basketfull of ripe brown chestnuts. Rebecca and Rachel had not been idle for they had wove and made up with neatest needlework a gown which in the eyes of the settlers was really superb.

"The night closed in. All was silent in the settler's home, and the family were wrapped in slumber. How peaceful was their sleep, all unbroken as it was by troubles of mind or pains of body! It was, indeed, what I once heard an orator say of it, 'Tired nature's sweet restorer, balmy sleep.'

"That is a quotation from the poet James Thomson," I interrupted.

"James Thompson, who's he?" asked the little old gentleman with a sneer, which led me to think I had offended him by appearing to recognize a quotation which he had not known, for I thought he, like some other little old men and young ones too, could not brook the idea of any one else knowing anything. "James Thompson, who's he?" again the little old man demanded.

"The English poet who sang about 'The Season's,' I answered meekly.

"English poet, humph!" exclaimed the little old gentleman most scornfully, "An English cannon ball cut off some of my branches during the Revolutionary war, and I have heartily hated the English ever since."

I thought to myself "People will sometimes be prejudised" but I did not venture to express it.

"The orator to whom I referred said the line was from 'Young's Night-thoughts,' continued he, 'but I thought to myself that Young must have been a fool to write about

BARGAINS! BARGAINS!!

The Bellefonte "Republican" and the "American Agriculturist."

We are now prepared to offer to the people of Centre county, a Great Bargain for the coming year. It is this: To every subscriber who will send us $3.00, in advance, we will s nd the

and the

for one year. Of the REPUBLICAN we need not speak at present.

The American Agriculturist is a work that no farmer, nor house keeper should be without. As a farm journal we think it has no superior in the world—certainly none in the United States. It is issued monthly, and the subscription price is $1.50 per annum. By clubing with the REPUBLICAN you save fifty cents, and secure more good reading matter than you can obtain in any other way for the same money.

We hope the reading public will avail themselves of this very liberal offer.

THE English Government are about appointing a "commission" to go to Washington to solve the "Alabama claims." Mr. Bright will, in all probability, be the chairman of the "commission."

THE annual value of sugar made from beet root, in France, exceeds five millions sterling, or twenty five million dollars. The sugar made from the beet root is now successfully competing with cane sugar in the English markets.

—The investigations made concerning the great gold conspiracy of last September, entirely exonerates Gen. Grant or his family from any connection with them. Will the Democratic papers publish the facts now, as they have published enough of their own statements of the matter.

—The first State election of 1870 is that of New Hampshire, which takes place in March. There are four candidates in the field for Governor—a Republican, Democratic, Temperance and Labor Reform and this complicates political affairs to such an extent as to render the result in the State somewhat doubtful.

By a "price current" recently received from London, we see Young Hyson Tea quoted at 10 and 11 pence per pound, about 22 cents of our currency. The same tea pays 3 pence duty on entering an English port. Here, for same tea, we pay $1.80 and $2.00 per pound. It is evident that good profits are derived from the tea trade.

SECRETARY Boutwell's monthly report shows the decrease in the Public Debt, during the month of January, to have been very nearly four millions of dollars, ($3,933,664.39) The total decrease since March 1st, of last year, eleven months of Republican administration, has been eighty and a half millions of dollars. These are facts that speak for themselves.

—A wonderful spectacle was observed in Germany on the night of the 1st of January. At Meseritz, from midnight to one o,clock, the entire northern sky presented the appearance of a sea of fire, from which fell a constant and dense shower of many colored sparks. The immense sheet of surging flame finally took the form of a fiery arch, from which the brilliant rain continued to descend till the whole waxed gradually fainter and disappeared.

MRS. PRESIDENT LINCOLN is not the only person of note who chose to dispose of her surplus wearing apparel at Auction. From over the water, and from what is supposed to be the most polite nation on the globe, we have the report of the sale, at auction, by the beautiful Empress Eugenie, the dresses she wore during her late Oriental tour, for the benefit of her Majesty's orphan school. The dresses, 250 in number, realized very small sums. The best, a rose colored satin, presentation dress, brought only 112 francs, and the rest went for trifling sums. It cannot be said that Imperial old clothes are at a premium.

AN HONEST GOVERNOR.—Governor Warmouth, of Louisiana, a colored man, was offered, but refused it, half a million of dollars to sign a bill passed by the Legislature of that State, issuing five millions in gold bearing bonds for redeeming the city of New Orleans scrip. He was also offered fifty thousand dollars to sign the bill passed for paving the streets of that city with the Nicholson pavement, and refused it also.

Will P. G. Meek have the fairness to notice in his paper, the honesty of this man as a patern to the members of this Legislature, and the "pinchers" and "roosters" of the last one? We dare say if Meek had been in this honest Governer's place he would have signed both bills for considerable less money than it would take to build a brick house.

The Ring's Love for Mechanics and Workingmen.

We have said a great deal against the Court House Ring, we know; but the half has not yet been told. The Ring is in power, and it has not the remotest idea of letting go its hold.—For the last ten years, about twenty men who claim to be simon pure Democrats, have controlled the destinies of that party in this county, and controlled it in such a manner as to fill their own coffers with greenbacks, not caring a continental for the success or welfare of that party outside of the chosen few who constitute the Ring.

We have frequently assured the workingmen and tax-payers of Centre county that this Ring was cold, selfish, dishonest and meanly aristocratic, and like the Southern slave-driver of former times, disliked the man who labored that he might live, and lived that he might labor. Their ideas are of that exalted character which lead small minds, when possessed of money or power, to think that they have few equals, no superiors, and who thank God that "they are not as other men."

Each member of the Ring is pledged to work for the interest, promotion and political and pecuniary welfare of his fellow member. And thus have they worked until they have all become slick and fat, and the very presence of a working man or mechanic offends their olfactory organs.

There was a time in Bellefonte, and Centre county, when those things were not so. When the County Commissioners acted independently of cliques and Rings, and when a good, honest mechanic, or daily laborer, could, once in awhile, receive some of the favors. There was a time when a mechanic, honest and industrious, like our friend Bartram Galbraith, and others we might name, could, without much trickery or fondling, obtain a duplicate to collect, and thus make a little money in their leisure moments. But alas, alas! those days and times have passed. No more favors for that class of men. Even our friend Galbraith, one of the most genteel and obliging tax collectors we have ever known must be thrust aside, and the honor of the duplicate and the advantages to be derived therefrom, small though they be, heaped upon a windy, stripling lawyer, to aid him to pay his boarding bills and keep him in good case for doing the windy and dirty work of the party, on the stump and in the political campaign.

Mr. Fortney must be taken care of—must have the duplicate, no matter if all the mechanics and workingmen in town should go idle and their families starve. Mr. Fortney must live that he may blow, and blow that he may live. The conduct of these men composing this infamous and anti-Democratic Ring reminds us of the little couplet, said to be very popular among all grades of thieves. It runs "thus'y:"

"Hey diddle, he diddle, hey, diddle dee,
I'll tickle you, if you'll tickle me."

Our amiable young friend, Mr. Fortney, wa un lerstan'l, likes the poetry, as well as the sentiment of the above, and is really rejoiced that the Ring has adopted it as its motto, and that he is in a fair way to become a prosperous member of the Ring.

But why waste our energies in expatiating on the tricks of the Ring?—We can stand it if the Democratic mechanics of the town can. Stand it! Of course they'll stand it. When the Ring master cracks his whip, they must all obey.

Labor Will Have its Reward.

UNIONVILLE, Feb. 5th 1870.

COL. W. W. BROWN.—

Dear Sir:—A good many of my neighbors, with myself, were much pleased with an article in your last paper in regard to Mechanics and laboring men. It had the Ring of the true metal, and called to our mind your efforts in behalf of the laboring class of years gone by, and also the efforts of some of your party leaders, who have grown rich from the sweat and toil of the laboring man, to "crush you out" because you were too Democratic in your ideas, in regard to the welfare of the working men of this County. The working men of this County know you to be their true friend and the only person in the County who ever succeeded in procuring Legislative enactment for their protection, and are glad to know that you are once more on your feet and that you still remain true to the cause of labor and that the Republican. is a success.

Herewith find enclosed ten dollars for which, send five copies of your paper for one year to * * *

They do not all belong to your party but say that you are the only one in the County, that advocates their interest and ought to be sustained. Our word to you is, go on in the good work and you will be well sustained by the masses regardless of the "crushing out Process" of your enemies, if they should be so foolish as to again attempt it. Yours,

J. D. P.

CONGRESSIONAL.

MR. ARMSTRONG, on leave, introduced the following bill: To provide for the redemption of not exceeding one hundred million dollars of the interest-bearing loan of the United States and the issue in exchange therefor of an equivalent amount of notes of circulation without interest.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled. That the Secretary of the Treasury be, and he is hereby, authorized and directed to issue on the credit of the U. S., such amount as may be necessary to carry out the provision of this act, not exceeding one hundred millions dollars of United States notes not bearing interest, payable to the bearer at the treasury of the United States, and of such denominations as he may deem expedient, not less than five dollars each; and such notes herein authorized shall be receivable in payment of all taxes, internal duties, excises, debts, and demands of every kind due to the U. S., except duties on imports, and which notes shall have indorsed thereon that they are receivable in payment as above stated, and that they are convertible, at their face value at the option of the holder, into the bonded interest-bearing loan of the United States, at the market value thereof, when presented in sums not less than one thousand dollars or any multiple of one thousand, at the office of the treasurer of the U. S.

SEC. 2. And be it further enacted, That any holder of any of the bonded loan of the United States shall be entitled, on presentation of any such bond or bonds, at the office of the treasurer of the U. S., in Washington, or at the office of the assistant treasurer in New York, in any sum not less than one thousand dollars or any multiple of one thousand, to exchange the same at their market value, which shall be determined if necessary by the Secretary of the Treasury, and to receive therefor from such treasurer or assistant treasurer, who is hereby required to deliver to such holder, a like amount at their face value, of the notes authorized by the first section of this act, and which bonds shall not be reissued, but shall be held subject to such disposition as other bonds of the United States redeemed or paid.

SEC. 3. And be it further enacted, That the Treasurer of the U. S., in Washington, or the assistant treasurer in New York, shall, and he is hereby required, on demand, at the office of the Treasurer of the U. S., in Washington, or at the office of the assistant treasurer in N. Y., by any holder of the notes authorized by the first section of this act, when presented in sums not less than one thousand dollars, or any multiple of one thousand, to redeem and exchange the same, and to deliver to such holder an equivalent amount in one or more bonds of the interest bearing loan of the United States now authorized, or which may be hereafter authorized by law, at the market value thereof, to be determined, when necessary, as aforesaid; and the Secretary of the Treasury shall determine what bonds of the authorized loan of the United States shall be thus exchanged.

SEC. 4. And be it further enacted, That the Treasurer of the United States in Washington, and the assistant treasurer in New York shall, from time to time, exchange the notes herein authorized for bonds, or bonds for notes, as the same shall be from time to time respectively demanded under the provisions of this act, until otherwise provided by law; and any fractional difference between the value of bonds and notes shall be paid in lawful money. And the Secretary of the Treasury shall cause to be kept a separate account of the notes and bonds from time to time issued and exchanged under the provisions of this act, and shall make monthly reports thereof, which shall be published with the monthly statement of the treasury.

The House Military Committee have perfected an elaborate bill affecting the organization and pay of the army. The chief features of the measure are: 1. The reduction by muster out of officers showing the best military records to be selected by a Board of Examination for retent on. 2. The repeal of all laws creating the officers of Gen. and Lieutenant General, the repeal to take effect as soon as vacancies occur in those offices; the reduction of the number of Major Generals from five to three, and of Brigadier Generals from ten to six; and the reduction of the eight additional Brigadier Gen. who are Chiefs of Staff Departments to the rank of Colonel, which they held before the war. 3. The abolition of brevet rank. 4. The transfer of the Indian Bureau to the War Department. 5. The payment of officers by fixed yearly allowances and commutations.

The nomination of Attorney-Gen. Hoar for the vacancy on the Supreme Court bench, occasioned by the death of Justice Wayne, was taken up in the Executive session of the Senate, and he was rejected by nine majority. The vote stood for confirmation, 24; against confirmation, 33.

Mr. Butler reported from the Reconstruction Committee a bill to admit Mississipi, precisely similar to the Virginia bill, and it became a law. Mr. Beck of Kentucky moved, as a substitute, a bill admitting the State unconditionally, and, on a call of the Yeas and Nays, got 85 votes, 33 of which were cast by Republicans.

The Senate refused to take up the House bill abolishing the Franking Privilege—22 to 34.

In the House, a resolution was adopted authorizing an investigation as to whether any Congressmen have sold appointments to the Military or Naval Academies.

A large number of bills are before Congress. Already during the present session 985 bills and 30 or 40 joint resolutions have been introduced in the House.

Let the people have patience, soon, very soon, Congress will give them the Legislation so much needed and which has been made necessary by the late rebellion that the Democratic party forced upon the Country. The present dull times are as much the result of the late rebellion, as the death of Stonewall Jackson, or the surrender of Gen. Lee, and his rebel hordes.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Our member, Mr. Myer, has made no effort, as yet to introduce the Mechanics Lien Law in the Legislature, published in our last issue, as requested by over two hundred mechanics.

The Metropolitan Police Bill has passed both house.

A bill has been introduced into our Legislature, similar to the Massachusetts Prohibitory liquor law, leaving it to the vote of the citizens of each district to say if they want any liquor sold.

"Momus" versus "D."

MESSRS. EDS:—We beg leave to prelude ourreply to the article entitled "The Critic Criticized," which appeared in your paper of the 2d inst., by apologizing to your readers for noticing it at all; but feeling assured that said article is positive proof of the truth and justness of our former criticism, silence, on our part, would show ingratitude to its author. From extreme modesty, which is a redeeming trait in "D," comparatively at least with his actions elsewhere, he affixed but one initial to his remarkably good-humored, even-tempered article; but for the purpose of more closely identifying this Reverend gentleman in our criticism, and not from any petulant malice, we quote from the proceedings of the Institute, under the captions of "The Lectures" and "Irregular Proceedings," sufficient for your readers to easily discern who the writer is, and if the tone of his reply is not also strictly "in keeping" with the manner of man we have described him:

"The lecture on Geology and Mineralogy, by Rev. S. J. Dorsey, showed great research, but was delivered in a harsh, stern tone, and imperative manner, seeming to convey us the idea "that he had addressed over one hundred audiences, and as yet has found none capable of appreciating him." *,

(The italicised words we quote from him verbatim et literatim, and in our former letter were charitable enough to give him the benefit of a doubt in the minds of your readers.)

"That his style of speaking was not in keeping with his clerical robes, none will dispute; but we admit there was somewhat of a mysterious LATINITY grandeur in many of his dissertations that made a weighty impression on his hearers, from the very fact of our inability to understand them."

Now, we ask the Reverend gentleman, that if one hundred former audiences were incapable of appreciating or understanding him, whether it may not be as impossible to find one in an hundred to come, as to get one congregation to believe that "the coming of the Messiah was foretold in the antediluvian times," in Genesis, as in St. John; or "that the three elements of Trinity are found everywhere in Nature, i. e., Salt representing God the Father; Mercury, God the Son, and Sulphur, God the Holy Ghost;" and that as we have it naturally, why not artificially—as for instance in the compounding of soft soap?

The second item that has caused our Reverend friend to become so rampantly blatant, was the following resolution, of which to him be credit of authorship, and we would run no risk in laying a wager, that for sublime simplicity in so few words, no literary genius can produce one that will go behind this:

"Resolved, That while the wisdom of the too common use of corporal punishment is doubtful, yet, that if used with judgment it ought not to be entirely discarded."

The last item we refer to, was wherein we gently hinted at his ingratitude and untruthfulness in charging the audience with the disorder occasioned by shamefully inebriated members, to which statement we further add, to the the honor of every teacher present—they were unanimous in calling the Reverend gentleman to order—though in vain were their efforts. To protect the sober, corteous and orderly citizens of H——, and visitors from elsewhere, from that infamous charge; the rendering of a fair and impartial criticism of many of the most palpable errors—of which "D" can certainly claim a majority; to attest that one thousand two hundred dollars are annually drawn from our school funds by a Superintendent, whose incompetency no one disputes, and since whose advent in office, the Common Schools have been evidently declining; to joc osely say that the comely phiz of Mager, Smull, Leisher or Dorsey, did not compare favorably with the fair and beautiful faces of the ladies,—why none of these can be an incentive for a wise man to anger; and the best we can do in this peculiar case is to endeavor to smooth down the ruffled temper of our Reverend friend—to treat him graciously and advise him wholesomely. My good Rev. sir! the Scriptures say that "a fool is presently known; but a wise man covereth shame" He that is soon angry dealeth foolishly," and that "the words of a wise man's mouth are gracious."

Don't you think, Rev. Mr. "D," as shepherd of a flock of Christian lambs who should look upon you as an embodiment of love, humility and meekness, that you have permitted your anger to lead you into the committal of a dreadful and unpardonable sin? and that you have stooped from your dignity as a man, in gathering from a Newgate encyclopædia such vile epithets as venomous liar, poisonous libeler, ass, ourang, snake, dog, baboon, drab, serpent, vagabond, etc., to bestow upon one as much of a man any-how, as yourself? And now, dear Reverend Mr. "D," out of our exceeding abundance of charity for you, we kindly offer advice, so that you may bring no more shame and disgrace upon yourself.

That your article is a very poisonous and filthy kind of vinegar, and that you were in a very sour state of mind when you manufactured it, is apparent to every one; and to say we were either angry or amused upon reading it would be untrue, for, indeed, we shed more sorrowful tears over your great fall, (you may bet 10 to 1), than flowed from our eyes at that affecting parting scene of the Institute. Our advice is, attend no more Institutes; let Geology alone, for you are not deep enough in the subject to become mad over it, and moderate a little on Theology for fear the world might place you on the list with Dosche, Parizot, Sonbira, Mason and Miller; leave to boatmen, roughs and convicts the exclusive right to their catalogue of profanity; leave three-fourths of the denizens of a little town who are inferior to you in intellect, and divided from you by an almost impenetrable wall of mountains, to live as christians according to their "capacity" for rendering the Scriptures; avoid making Sabbath day journeys to find help in revising your criticism, and stoop not from that dignity ennobling in man, and most becoming in one whose calling is to instill in the minds of all men those three most rare and excellent virtues—religion, love and charity—abuse and vilify no man in a like narrow-minded manner again. Follow this advice, dear Reverend sir, and keep cool under all circumstances, as it will lengthen out your thread of life, gain you some respect, and keep you from erring in the future.

Dear readers, we will now submit this controversy and criticism to your candid judgment, knowing full well that the logical conclusion you will arrive at is, that as our Reverend friend's writing is "not in keeping with his clerical robes," then our former criticisms of him perforce must be true.

The number of wells sunk during the year was about 1100, or about one hundred and fifty more than during the previous year.

THE Presbyterians, at Philipsburg, are holding this week, a protracted meeting for the purpose of recruiting their ranks. It will extend over next Sabbath.

CHANGE.—John Russel, who now keeps the Aaronsburg hotel, retires from it in the spring and Mr. Rubb, of Harleton, Union County, takes his place.

WATER.—We are happy to inform our readers that after a plentiful supply of Bucks to our town council the borough water works are again able to supply our citizens with the usual amount of water.

EDUCATIONAL.—Parents or guardians, wishing to give their children or wards a good education, cannot find a more desirable institution than the Academy of this place. Rev. J. P. Hughes, Principal. It is in a flourishing condition and has tried and capable teachers in all its departments. For further information consult our advertising columns.

DENTISTRY.—Persons deprived of their natural teeth, can have them replaced with artificial ones which will answer the same purpose as the natural, and a great deal handsomer, by calling on Dr. Wingate. He also extracts teeth with as little pain as the latest discoveries in science will permit. See his card in another column.

LYING.—All the world seems to be given to lying—authors, editors even preachers are not exempt. The writer of this is sometimes guilty of lying long—in the morning. But the scoundrel who stole Dr. J. B. Mitchell's best feather bed is determined to lie easy whether his conscience, if he has any permits him or not, allowing the good docter to do his lying on something else than his favorite bed.

FATAL ACCIDENT.—We learn from a correspondent of the Reporter, that Mr Geo. W. Heckman, of Beuna Vista, Pa., but formerly of Penn Hall, this county met with a fatal accident on the 12th ult. Mr. Heckman was working on the roof of his house, when he slipped and was precipitated to the ground, breaking his thigh and otherwise injuring him. His leg was amputated but on the 23d ult. died from hemorage of the lungs produced by internal injuries. The deceased leaves a wife and one child.

OPPOSITION.—The citizens of the locality known as the "Loop," this county, have established a "Court" in opposition to the one held in this place, at which even handed justice, it is said, is dealt out to every one without respect to persons, and free of cost. The verdict of the jury is generally respected by both parties.

PHILIPSBURG LITERATI.—On last Friday evening, our reporter informs us, the society met in the Union church. An essay entitled "Female Education" was read by Miss Emma Swartz. The lady treated the subject logically and fully proved that it was commendable. She dwelt particularly upon the influence of females and insisted that by more education they would be more influential. She not only intimated but really affirmed that her influence (meaning woman's influence) extended to heads of nations and assisted in disposing of questions of vital importance. The mother, the sister and the wife have their influence which far exceeds that of man in any station of life. She also argued that if a woman's mind was susceptible of cultivation it should be cultivated, as well as man's.

The debate was upon the following resolution: That the U. S Government should grant belligerant rights to Cuba. The affirmative was discussed by Messrs Johnston and Kline, and the negative by Messrs. Walker and Swartz. The judges decided in favor of the affirmative.

The society has established a paper called the "Literary Review," which will appear monthly and be read at the second regular meeting of each month. hence next Friday evening we expect to listen to a good paper.

The society expects to hold a "public" session on the evening of the 22d of February. The order of exercises will be appropriate.

MUSIC AND DRAWING SCHOOL.—Among the many institutions of learning, of which Centre county can boast, none rank higher in the esteem of many of her citizens than the select Music and Drawing school, of which that accomplished lady and scholar Mrs. M S Dunham is Principal That she is one of the best musicians in the State, no one who is acquainted with her will deny. She is also the author of several of the best musical productions of the times.

The other day we had the pleasure of being present at the examination of one of her classes, and listened to their recitations, which for thoroughness, correctness and harmony excelled our most sanguine expectations, and demonstrated the fact, that Bellefonte can produce as good native musical talent as can be found anywhere, if properly developed.

Mrs. Dunham is a graduate of one of the eastern Seminaries, and was a musical pupil of Professors Kotchmire, of Germany, and Edwards, of Boston. She was for a long time teacher in the New Gloucester Seminary, of Maine, which institution is noted far and wide for its thoroughness in imparing useful knowledge. That her talents are duly appreciated by our people is fully attested by the large number of pupils attending her school and her ability as a teacher, by the progress made in their studies.

HUSTON TOWNSHIP.—We gather the following news items from our Huston township Reporter:

—The lumbermen are nearly all idle for the want of snow consequently their business has come to a dead halt.

—The Baptists are about completing a very comfortable church. They are holding a series of meetings with considerable success.

—Some of our oldest inhabitants have recently "passed away" First, Mr John Singleton, aged about 75 years, on retiring to bed, fell and died instantly Mr. John Dillon, of about the same age, died a few days ago after a short illness. Mr. John Spotts has had two strokes of palsy and his recovery is doubtful.

—Quite a sensation was produced by the action of two of the school directors, in ejecting a school teacher from his school and dismissing the pupils, in our reporter's opinion, without sufficient cause. Petitions are in circulation to have said directors dismissed and others appointed in their place.

THE MYSTERY SOLVED.—"A glorious session" was indulged in by Messrs Brainerd & Furey, and individually each went off at a greater angle than a tangent, on what they saw and felt while on a big bust. The filthy covering on the Wycoff pavement (nothing like it ever disgraced Bishop street,) became so rantankerous as to throw them into the hole, where the discovery was made a few days ago, of a stump of a gigantic tree Somehow it must be the dwelling of a Fairie, as notwithstanding their bruises they went off into a trance, and glorious were the sights they saw. The new town of Alexandria, caves, caverns, grottoes, &c., &c., sprung into existance before their diseased imaginations.

In their waking hours they each try to outdo the other, in describing the sublimity of the sights. They promise to have another and still greater exhibition on or about April first. The scientific and curious may then wait for a rich sell and half dollars may in the meantime be stored up for exhibition fees.

PHYSICIAN AND SURGEON.—It is with pleasure we call the attention of our readers to the professional card of Dr. Thomas R. Hayes in our advertising columns. Dr Hayes, formerly of Mifflinburg, Pa., has determined to make Bellefonte his home. He comes amongst us, bearing with him the best of credentials, and is recommended by some of the best medical men in the State. We hope our citizens may ever enjoy good health and have no occasion to employ a Phisician; but if disease should come, as no doubt it will, we would ask for Dr. Hayes the confidence and patronage of those needing his services and skill.

JOB WORK.—We are opposed to betting as a general rule; but we will wager three dishes of H. D. Ruble's best Oysters, that we turn out more and better job work than any other printing office in town.

Our new Gordon is kept busy, and it is a real pleasure to see it work.

Persons wishing Bill-heads, Letter heads, Envelopes, Posters large or small will find it to their interest to call at the Republican Job Office.

For the Republican.

Sunday School Libraries.

EDITORS OF THE REPUBLICAN:

My attention has been called to a communication in your paper two weeks ago, in regard to remarks made by Gen. Beaver, in relation to our Sunday school libraries, at the late session of the Centre County Sunday School Institute, held at Rebersburg. Since then I have re-examined the books composing our Sunday School Library and have been unable to find any books composing it, of an utterly worthless and vicious character. There are, however, the histories of the lives of one or two of our late generals that are not altogether what they might be in regard to strict truthfulness, yet they are very far from being "vicious" or "worthless."

Other Sunday school libraries that I have had the pleasure of being connected with will compare favorably with our own. It is the library department that creates the greatest interest among children in the Sunday school cause and an injury done it, effects the whole cause. How our young and christian friend, Gen. Beaver, who seems to wish to do good, should make such a bad mistake, is beyond my comprehension Yours in the Sabbath school cause.

PHILIPSBURG.—The following items we gather from the Philipsburg Journal:

—A project is on foot, we understand, among our citizens to take an excursion to Williamsport, at what time we do not know.

—The carriage shop of W. A. Ogden, at Williamsgrove, Clearfield county was destroyed by fire on Friday of last week.

—Mr S. Gordon was severely injured on Saturday morning last, while loading a car with lumber at the planing mill of Way, Foster & Co., by accidentally falling from the pile of lumber and striking upon the edge of the car

—The Philipsburg Literary Society is an institution, and is destined to be a complete success. A public session will be given on the evening of the 22d of February, in commemoration of the birth of the "Father of his Country."

—Crystal Wave Social T. of H. celebrated its first anniversary, on Friday evening of last week, by a convivial meeting and partaking of an oyster supper at J. H. Gance's.

CENTRAL CITY.—The following we learn from our Central City Reporter.

A few evenings ago, "mine host" of the Curtin House, was considerably demoralized by the appearance of a middle aged couple who demanded of him to be "chiched together," as they wished to travel the rest of life's roadible. The bride was gaily dressed in silk and satin, while the groom wore a swallow tailed coat, of the fashion of 60 years ago. The Capt not being in that line of business, sent word to a justice of the Peace, who soon made his appearance and the happy twain were made one in the flesh. They then soon left, and in about an hour the groom come back, paid his respects and then left for the night, and the last heard from him he was as well as could be expected.

If you have a discharge from the nose, offensive or otherwise, partial loss of the sense of smell, taste or hearing, eyes watering or weak, feel dull and stupid or debilitated, pain or pressure in the head, take cold easily, you may be sure you have the CATARRH. Thousands annually, without manifesting half of the above symptoms, terminate in consumption and end in the grave. No disease is so common, more deceptive or less understood by physicians. Dr. R. V. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., is the proprietor of Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy—a perfect specific for Catarrh, "Cold in the Head," or Catarrhal Headache, which he sends to any address by mail on receipt of sixty cents. Sold by most Druggists everywhere.

ENTERPRISE.—It is time that old fogyism in trade was buried; so thinks Levi A. Miller, one of the most energetic business men that this or any other county can boast of. Since Mr. Miller has been engaged in the grocery business in this place, he has, by his fair dealing, revolutionized the trade as hundreds who visit his store daily can fully attest. His motto being "quick sales and small profits," added to an urbanity of manner makes his place of business a resort for all who wish good Goods at good bargains.

A RARE TREAT.—A Musical Convention will be held on the 17th inst., and continue until Saturday evening, the 19th inst., when it will close with a grand Concert, at the Shiloh church, between this place and Boalsburg. All lovers of good music should put in an attendance as that part of our county boasts of having some of the best musical talent in the State. The Ferguson township string band will be in attendance.

RAILROAD MEETINGS.—The friends of the Penns Valley R. R., are requested to attend the following meetings:

Spruce Creek, February 9th,
Pine Grove, February 10th,
Boalsburg, February 11th,
Centre Hill, February 12th,
Penn Hall, February 14th,
Millheim, February 15th
Rebersburg, February 16th,
Aaronsburg, February 17th.

Hon. G. F. Miller, and others, will be present to address these meetings.

SPRING MILLS M. E. CHURCH.—We received last week, from our reporter at Spring Mills, an account of the re opening or dedication of the M. E. church, at that place; but it reached us too late for insertion. From it we gather the following facts:

The church is very neat and comfortable, all new, except the frame, plastering and floor, walls and ceiling papered with good paper. The entire cost of the improvement was about $1,400. On the day of dedication, which was January 9th, there was $1,100 to provide for. Prof. S. L. Bowman and Rev. M. P. Crosthwaite were the preachers present. Prof Bowman did most of the preaching and did it well.

Owing to certain causes, such as a dedication in Brush Valley on the same day, &c., the congregation was comparatively small. Judging from the size of the congregation, scarcely any man would have believed that $1,100 could be raised. The preachers looked discouraged, and by their appearance rather indicated that the amount could not be raised. They learned better before the meeting closed and had impressed upon their minds very forcibly what an M. E. Penns Valley congregation can do.

To raise the money, or in common parlance, to do the begging, was made the especial duty of Rev. M. P. Crosthwaite. And oh! how earnestly he engaged in the work, with hope and fear, with prayer and faith, and to the great astonishment and joy of all the people succeeded in raising the amount. Everybody says that no Bishop or D. D. could have done better than Rev. Crosthwaite, and no congregation of the same size could have been expected to give more.

From all we can learn in relation to this dedication it must have been one of the most religious meetings of the kind held in this county for many years. Revs. Bowman and Crosthwaite did their duty faithfully, the members prayerfully sustained them and the people all opened their purses and poured them into the treasury of the Lord.

THE latest novelty in Philipsburg, is a masquerade ball held there two weeks ago, at which there was a good attendance of persons including church members.

DEDICATION.—The Lutheran church of this place will be dedicated, on next Sunday, the 13th inst.

LOVE LIGHTENS LABOR.

A good wife rose from her bed one morn,
And thought with a nervous dread
Of the piles of clothes to be washed, and more,
Than a dozen mouths to be fed.
There are meals to be got for the men in the field
And the children to fix away,
To school, and the milk to be skimmed and churned,
And all to be done that day.

It had rained in the night, and all the wood
Was wet as it could be;
And there was pudding, and pies to bake,
Besides a loaf of cake for tea.
The day was hot, and her aching head
Throbbed wearily as she said—
"If maidens but knew what good wives know
They would be in no hurry to wed."

"Jennie, what do you think I told Ben Brown?"
Called the farmer from the well;
And a flash crept up his bronzed brow,
And his eye half bashfully fell,
"It was this," he said, and coming near,
He smiled and stooped down,
Kissed her cheek—"It was this, that you were
The best, and the dearest wife in the town!"

The farmer went back to the field, and the wife,
In a smiling and absent way,
Sang snatches of tender little songs
She'd not sung for many a day.
And the pain in her head was gone and the clothes
Were white as the foam in the sea;
Her bread was light, and her butter was sweet,
And golden as it could be.

"Just think," the children all called in a breath,
"Tom Wood has run off to sea!
He would'nt I know, if he only had
As happy a home as we,"
The night came down, and tha good wife smiled,
To herself, as she softly said:
"Tis sweet to labor for those we love,
Tis not strange that maids will wed!"

Buying Land.

THE exercise of sound judgement is required to purchase land most advantageously, and too many young persons, when they set out to buy a farm, fail to look beyond their wishes in the matter, to consider the various conditions that should control one's decision. It often happens that a man who has money enough to purchase a well-improved farm of an hundred acres in a settled, prosperous region, will buy a tract of six or seven hundred acres of wild land, remote from cities and facilities for reaching market, because he indulges the belief that his energy and skill will make his wilderness "blossom like the rose" and produce large and remuncrative crops. Then, too, it is pleasing to one's vanity to be considered the owner of such an extensive estate. A short time, a year at least, suffices to dispel such fancies. He had to build a dwelling or re-build the one he found on his place to make it habitable; then, having devoted all his money to paying for the land, he is unable to stock his farm or procure necessary implements and conveniences, and he finds that it is utterly impossible to work satisfactorily or profitably, or conduct the usual farm operations; then, saddest disappointment of all, he realizes that, with tireless energy, unwavering preseverance, the highest degree of skill and practical knowledge, and the use of powerful fertilizers, it will take years to render his large estate remunerative. When this unpleasant unavoidable conviction is forced on his mind, he is ready to acknowledge that it would have been far wiser if he had taken fewer acres of fertile land, with desirable improvements, and the additional advantages of good roads, access to markets churches, schools, and agreeable society.

It is much easier to maintain the improvements on a farm, and keep up the quality of stock, than to bring wild land into a productive condition and supply it with superior stock of approved varieties. The primary object in farming is to make money, and this cannot be done unless the different branches are systematically and economically conducted; the work must be promptly and thoroughly performed, and nothing must escape the notice of the intelligent mind that supervises and directs the management of affairs. A large farm, like an immense army, requires for its successful management the highest degree of tact, consummate skill, untiring industry and vigilance, and a full comprehension of all the available resources and surrounding circumstances.

In his report of 1869, the Commissioner of Agriculture says: "The greed for the acquisition of land is a serious bar to progress in farm improvement. The aim of the pioneer has been, not to become a good farmer but a holder of broad acres to grow more wheat, to buy more land. The result is a sparse settlement, poor roads, straw stables, few farm implements, and a slow advance in prices of real estate after the first sudden rise in values. It is a dangerous fallacy that non-productive farm lands are profitable."—Farmer's Journal.

CALIFORNIA has five peach trees to every voter.

Coffee Making.

Java coffee has a large, full, yellow berry, while that of Rio is smaller, and of a greenish tinge. The difference in essential properties is derived from the difference in climate, that of Java permitting the beam to ripen more perfectly than it is left to do in Brazil, where it is raised chiefly by unskilled slave labor. The best coffee for farmers is made by mixing the two—Java affording the most fragrance, and Rio the most stimulus and protection against chilliness and damps. Very much depends upon the parching of coffee. This should be done slowly at first to expel all the moisture, and rapidly at last, stirring it constantly so that it will be uniformly browned, and not burned in the least. When it has an oily appearance, and is of a light brown color, it should be removed at once from the fire and put into a close vessel.

We have tried a great many ways of making coffee and a great many different coffee pots; but for family use we have never found anything better than a good block tin pot, and the white of an egg to clear the beverage. We grind two table spoonfuls to a person put it in the pot, add the white of an egg and sufficient cold water to moisten the whole, stir it together and let it warm on the stous, then pour on boiling water and let it boil two or three minutes only, unless those who drink it have been exposed to cold and damp, or are anticipating such exposure. In that case it should remain over the fire fifteen or twenty minutes, long enough to extract some of the bitter principle which is of the nature of quinine in its effect on the system.

Coffee grounds should never be allowed to stand in tin, but should be poured out and the pot carefully cleansed as soon as it is used, else the flavor or the next beverage made in it will be impaired. Soft water is very much preferable to hard for making good coffee, as the mineral salts in the latter often combine unpleasantly with the constituents of coffee, and give it an acrid taste. There is no good reason why our tables should so ferquently be disgraced with muddy, bitter, riley coffee, when a little care and a little skill can furnish a beverage aromatic, exhilarating and delighful.—New York Tribune.

How Often to Examine Hives.

Mr. Quincy having noticed in the Bee Journal a query as to how often hives should be examined in the course of the season, replied thus in the Rural New Yorker: If the propounder of this question fears to injure his stock by too frequent examination, let him be reassured—there is not the slightest danger. Neglect has destroyed more, a thousand fold, than the mere opening of the hives. My advice is, "know the condition of your bees at all times." If this questioner wants to keep them with as little attention as possible, counting their care an irksome task, I am afraid he will soon be one who "had bad luck." They do require a liberal amount of care. Were I to commence bee keeping again, I should do as I have done, be careful to let few days go by without examination and study. Your success will largely depend on the accuracy and extent of your knowledge. You know what years of study and labor are required to make a good engineer. What would you think of a man who should try to run a locomotive without them? Well, without a willingness to do something like this, don't undertake bee keeping. Knowing is the first and indispensable condition of successful doing everywhere. So, if you are a beginner, look at your bees every day; the bees will stand it and you need it. Of course, five hundred hives in double that number of apiaries, cannot be seen so often without great expense. Perhaps once a week will do, on an average.

Fowls Vs Worms.

M. Giot, the French entomologist, has lately found new employment for fowls. He says that French farmers have, during the past year, complained bitterly of the prevalence of worms which infest corn and other crops the highest cultivated fields being the most infested. Fowls are known to be the most indefatigable worm destroyers, pursuing their prey with extraordinary instinct and tenacity.—But fowls cannot conveniently be kept upon every field, nor are they wanted there at all seasons. Therefore, M. Giot has invented a perambulating fowl house, described as follows.

"He has large omnibuses fitted up with perches above, the nests beneath. The fowls are shut in at night, and the vehicle is drawn to the required spot, and, the doors being opened in the morning, the fowls are let out to feed during the day in the fields.—Knowing their habitation, they enter it at night-fall without hesitation, and roost and lay their eggs as well as in any other house."

The plan is said to answer admirably in every respect in the old country, and it would undoubtedly prove also beneficial in this country. Let farmers give it a trial, and report their experience though the columns of the Rural.-Rural New Yorker.

TOAST WATER.—Toast slowly a thin piece of bread till quite brown and hard, but not the least black, plunge in cold water, and cover it over an hour before used. This is very serviceable for weak bowels. It should be a fine brown color before drinking it.

A FORTY ONE POUND turkey was lately brought to a Philadelphia market.

PITTSBURGH COMMERCIAL.

DAILY AND WEEKLY.

As a thorough newspaper, sparing neither labor nor expense to furnish the fullest and most reliable intelligence; as the fearless, consistent, and persistent opponent of corruption in office an advocate of Honesty, Economy, Retrenchment and Reform in public affairs; as the sworn foe of "Rings" and every description of dishonest combination,—just as ready to expose their practices in the Republican as Democratic party, and even more so, because it holds that a party that will cast out offenders of this description entitles itself to the confidence of the people—as an Independent Republican journal, the advocate of the rights and interests of the peop'e—The Pittsburg Commercial needs no introduction to the reading public.

IT IS A PROGRESSIVE PAPER,

And keeps up in the march of improvement and the development of ideas. Thoroughly alive to everything that is valuable or interesting, it identifies itself at once and heartily with whatever seems calculated to improve mankind and elevate the standard of intelligence and morality. As a Republican journal of the strictest sect, it deals with political questions with an earnest wish to get at the truth and place only good and capable men in office.

IT IS A PEOPLE'S PAPER,

And relies on their support and good opinion rather than the favors of political leaders. Nor has it done so in vain. Its independent course—more especially in denouncing legislative corruption and exposing the practices of thieves in office—has made it the favorite of the masses and the feared of the dishonest aspirants and debauched party leaders. Of the reputation it has earned in this respect it is sincerely proud; and it wishes no different standing in the field of journalism in this regard than a discriminating public promptly accorded to it. To prove faithful to their confidence and good opinion will be its constant endeavors.

IT IS A LIVE PAPER,

And ranks with the leading journels which are thoroughly awake to all that is going on. Its News Department is always fresh and full. Its editorials are written with a purpose in view. Its market Reports and Commercial News gatherings are meant to supply the most exacting demands of the business public.

IT IS A PROSPEROUS AND GROWING PAPER,

Having from the start gone ahead, outstripping older occupants of the field of journalism; and it has attained to a prosperity and come to exert an influence second to no paper in the State. That it has fairly won the rank of the first paper in Pennsylvania is the verdict of newspaper readers in general.

IT IS A PAPER OF INFLUENCE,

It being read more generally than any other Pittsburg paper by the business, professional and thinking classes. It is always found where the latest and fullest news is sought, and an independent paper prized,—in Banking Houses, Counting Rooms and the Family Circle, where it is welcomed as a business and is constant and increasing.

ITS PAST COURSE IS ITS BEST RECOMMENDATION,

And it is felt that there is no necessity for indulging in new professions or making fresh promises. It means, while adhering to its standard in politics and morals, to improve as it progresses, and omit nothing that will add to its strength or increase its usefulness.

THE NEXT YEAR.

The Commercial enters on another year strong and hopeful, and with a deliberate purpose consistent with what has been said above. And it does not hesitate to ask the co-operation of all who approve of that purpose. No hesitation is felt in saying that it desires this support in increasing its circulation and enlarging the sphere of its usefulness. The season is at hand when Congress and the Legislature will be in session, and stirring events at both the National and State Capital will be transpiring. The measures of the splendid administration of General Grant will soon be before the country—embracing questions of the deepest interest to every reader and taxpayer. The State Legislature, too, will present matters of interest. Abroad, the signs are animatting; and at home in the field of politics, popular movements relating to education and religious questions are appearing, of which no one should permit himself to be ignorant, and concerning which all that is essential to be known will be the aim of the Commercial to give.
